The Cliff House.

The Examiner in speaking of the Cliff House says:

San Francisco has lost one of her few distinctions. The Cliff House was not an architectural marvel, but those rickety walls were redolent of the happy, generous, easy-going spirit of the old Californian. It was a tolerant, unpuritanical city that had the Cliff for one of its chief attractions. Probably no resort of exactly the same kind could win such a reputation now. But in the old days the Cliff House was as famous as the Yosemite, or as the seals, of which it was uncertain whether they or the house gained the more celebrity from the association.

When distinguished strangers used to take in the lions of San Francisco the place was even poorer in architectural attraction than it is now. There were no buildings that would draw a second glance in any Eastern or European city. But the visitor to the Cliff House was not looking for masterpieces. He was looking for a good time, and he got it, and spread the fame of it abroad. The new Cliff House will be more magnificent structure than the old, but it is safe to say that it will not be responsible for so many genial memories in every corner of the earth.

Inclement Weather.

The weather we are experiencing is said by old settlers to be somewhat phenomenal. The temperature is exceedingly frigid and the cold wave is accompanied by a fall of snow and icy fog, pogonip, as the Indians term it, which makes it extremely uncomfortable to be out of doors. Snow commenced falling at about midnight Wednesday and continued until noon yesterday. The fall, however, was not great. The pogonip seems to be always with us.—Enterprise.

With the exception of the pogonip the weather here might be reported nearly as bad as that on the Comstock. It now looks like the weather is trying to rival the Winter of 1889. The ground is thoroughly frozen and with the six inches of fresh snow that has fallen it is a sure thing that the ground will be covered the rest of the Winter. Good sleighing is now in order and many people are taking advantage of it.

A Mule Freight Train.

Fresno, December 26.—Charles Campbell's mule team arrived here today from Stockton after a journey of more than two weeks. The team was mired soon after leaving Stockton and had to plow its way through the mud all the way to Merced. Beyond that point the roads were somewhat better, but the progress was slow at best. When near Turlock three of the ten tons of freight in the wagons were transhipped and sent by rail. The local agent of Wellman, Peck & Co. to whom the goods were consigned, says the experiment is not by any means a final one and that the fight has only just begun. The wagon will likely be started for Stockton again just as soon as the roads dry up.

A Coming Attraction.

The Young Ladies Cadet Club of the State University, have decided to give an entertainment here on Friday evening Jan. 11. They should meet with a hearty response from the people of this city, as the profits from the entertainment are to go to the gymnasium fund. Every one who has an interest in the future of the University should patronize this local affair, and see that the girls have a hearty reception. Forty young ladies will take part. The box sheet will be open Saturday next.
